K.G. Anderson is a late-blooming speculative fiction writer who focuses on short fiction. Her stories reflect her Jewish heritage, her work in technology and journalism, her time spent in coastal cities and her activism for women, seniors, and affordable, universal healthcare. writerway.com/fiction

Former software engineer Carol Berg (aka Cate Glass) never believed she could write one fantasy epic, never mind eighteen, never mind win the Mythopoeic Fantasy Award and four Colorado Book Awards. Her most recent is A Summoning of Demons. www.carolberg.com

Rebecca A. Demarest is an award-winning author, playwright, book designer, and writing instructor living in Seattle, WA, with her husband and a stowaway lizard, two Muppets, and three rescue dart frogs. www.rebeccademarest.com

Jude-Marie Green's stories appear in Daily Science Fiction, Toasted Cake, The Colored Lens, and Electric Spec. She has edited for Abyss&Apex, Noctem Aeternus, and 10Flash Quarterly. She attended Clarion West, is a member of Codex, and won the Speculative Literature Foundation's Older Writer's Grant. Find her short fiction collection, Glorious Madness, on Amazon. judemarie.wordpress.com

Debora Godfrey has been writing since tenth grade English class, spinning stories about Russian spies when everyone else was reading Macbeth. She was published in several Alternative anthologies, co-edited two more, and is editor for the upcoming anthology Madam President. She lives in Washington.

Marta Murvosh's stories appear in Abyss & Apex, and the anthologies Tales of the Sunrise Lands and Legends of the Mountain State. A former newspaper journalist, she now works as a teen librarian and freelances news features to trade publications. She is a member of Codex. murvosh.weebly.com
