When worrywart Chen Connelly finds a mysterious antique book beneath a park bench, his safe but lonely summer suddenly becomes exciting.

Perhaps a little too exciting.

Now he's popping through the book's magical doors with Polly Goggin, the oddest girl he's ever met, as they race to solve a treasure hunt left by Benjamin Franklin, strive to find their way through the maze of mysterious doors, and dodge far too many angry security guards. And it definitely doesn't help that a murderous, strangely nondescript magician is on their trail, willing to do whatever it takes to get his hands on the Franklin treasure and all three Extraordinary Books.

It begins with a book.
Where will it lead?

A middle grade fantasy adventure featuring chases, escapes, a curious cat, some questionable fashion sense, and scenes set at the Cleveland Museum of Art, the Louvre, the Old South Meeting House in Boston, Independence Hall in Philadelphia, and other Locations of Historical and Magical Interest. Includes illustrations of the magical doors.

A thrilling adventure packed full of twists and turns. A BRONZE MEDAL WINNER and highly recommended.

It is an absolutely lovely premise, made even more so by the black and white illustrations of doors drawn by the author included throughout! And it's an exciting adventure, too, given depth by the friendship, uncertain at first, that grows between Chen and Polly.

The Extraordinary Book of Doors is a beautiful book. Recommended for people who wonder what is behind doors, who enjoy riddles, and who like tales of new friendships.

I loved the premise of a book of doors which the reader can enter. A lovely book in many ways. The writing was light and perfect for the age group. The children in my class loved it.
