

Ora has always been on the run. As a witch in hiding, she's had no choice. Moving from city to city with her mom kept them safe but didn't leave room for friendship. One day Ora is caught using her magic, but not just by anyone. A young wizard named Will from the world she has been running from catches her. Instead of discovering her secret, Will assumes she is like him. For the first time Ora is able to be herself and have a friend. But as their friendship grows, Ora risks capture if she is discovered, but really what's the worst thing that could happen?
